WANT EXTRA SESSION

Petition Filed With Gov. Beckham This Morning at Frankfort.

It Is Not Believed That Guatemala Will Demand the Alleged Murderers.

PETITIONS FOR IMPROVEMENT

WANTS EXTRA SESSION.

Frankfort, Nov. 24.—Hon. Sam W. Booker, president of the Home Tobacco Warehouse company, recently incorporated at Louisville to fight the warehouse combine, headed a delegation that called on Governor Beckham this morning and petitioned for extra session of the legislature to regulate the warehouse business in Louisville. The home company was excluded from the Louisville leaf tobacco exchange.

A PRIMARY IS PROBABLE.

Frankfort, Nov. 24.—The state board of election commissioners met at the office of the secretary of state at noon today and are canvassing the returns in the congressional and appellate districts, and issuing certificates. An anti-primary man says today that there is every probability that the meeting of the Democratic executive committee will result in the calling of a primary, instead of a delegate convention to nominate candidates for the state ticket.

Washington, Nov. 24.—The state department says that it sees no reason why the departure of Leslie M. Combs to his new post should be expedited. This means that it does not expect the government of Guatemala to request that young Hunter and Bailey be turned over to their courts for trial. At the White House this morning a correspondent was informed that Dan Collier would be made pension agent to succeed Combs just as soon as there was a vacancy. The president has finally passed on the matter.

FOR IMPROVING THE OHIO.

Louisville, Nov. 24.—A petition was forwarded to President Roosevelt today signed by thousands of persons, requesting him to incorporate in his message to congress a recommendation to look and dam the Ohio river. Nearly every town on Ohio will send a similar petition this week.

MEET THIS EVENING.

COMMITTEES AND OFFICIALS TO HOLD A CONFERENCE AT THE CITY HALL.

It was announced by city officials this afternoon that tonight the two committees, one from the board of aldermen and one from the council, will meet the city officials interested at the city hall, and ascertain what agreement can be reached in regard to the matter of curtailing fees, and paying the revenue from the police court into the proper channels.

It is not known what will be done nor how anything else can be done except to order the funds paid where the law says they shall be paid. An effort, it is said, will be made to reconcile the officials to what is coming.

WORK STOPPED TEMPORARILY.

Work on the new steam heating plant has stopped temporarily, owing to the bad weather of Saturday and today. The ditches were progressing rapidly, but the inclement weather has set them back, and it may be several weeks before the concern is ready to furnish any heat.

Death

From Bad Dreams if Heart is Weak.

To Awake in Fear a Bad Symptom.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Will Cure You.

Recent investigations by specialists on the heart have demonstrated that in nine cases out of ten of deaths in bed, heart action was stopped by fear, which bad dreams or night-mare had brought on. After a careful study of the habits of those who died in over a thousand cases, it has been found that the majority had been sufferers from nightmare or nocturnal disturbances of dreamland, and that frequently they awoke in the middle of the night completely exhausted and gravely alarmed through some particularly vivid dream. Thus we learn to recognize dreaming and nightmare as a marked symptom of heart disease. Be warned in time. Strengthen the heart's action with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, which enriches the blood, improves the circulation, regulates the pulse and invigorates the heart nerves.

"When I would go home at night and sit down, I did not feel like moving. When I tried to sleep I would doze off and then wake with a sudden fright. This would happen several times during the night and when morning came I felt like iron weights were attached to me and dragging me down. I doctored with home physicians and took treatment from specialists but nothing did me any good until I commenced taking Dr. Miles' Remedies. The Heart Cure, Nerve and Nerve and Liver Pills were what I used and I am thankful to say they have cured me."—H. B. HYDE, 2414 S. Rampart Street, New Orleans, La.

A DANGEROUS MONTH.

This is the month of coughs, colds and acute catarrh. Do you catch cold easily? Find yourself hoarse, with a tickling in your throat and an annoying cough at night? Then you should always have handy a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup. J. A. Anderson, 354 West Fifth St., Salt Lake City, writes: "We use Ballard's Horehound Syrup for coughs and colds. It gives immediate relief. We know it's the best remedy for these troubles. I write this to induce other people to try this pleasant and efficient remedy." 25c, 50c and $1 at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

TAKES CHARGE OF THE TURNER FARM.

Mr. Dow Craig, teacher at the Eden's Hill school near the city, has resigned to accept the superintendency of the Turner farm in Ballard county, having been selected by the Fidelity Trust company of Louisville, which has charge of the Turner estate. No one has yet been selected by County Superintendent Ragsdale to succeed him at the school.

BEAUTIFUL CLEAR SKIES.

Herbina exerts a direct influence on the bowels, liver and kidneys, purifying and strengthening these organs and maintaining them in a normal condition of health; thus removing a common cause of yellow, mothly, greasy skin and more or less of pimples, blotches and blackheads. 50c at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

OTHER NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES

MAYFIELD'S DISTIN. GUSHED GUEST.

Mayfield, Ky., Nov. 24—Congressman James Lucas Slayden, of San Antonio, Tex., a former resident of Mayfield, is here on a visit to his brother, W. J. Slayden. He was born in Graves county June 1, 1853, and when he went to Texas became a cotton merchant.

He was elected to the 33d legislature of Texas in 1892; he declined a re-election, but was elected to 55th, 56th and 57th congress. His term in congress will expire March 4, 1903. He has been elected to congress from the Twelfth district, the third time, which is composed of 37 counties.

ANOTHER FIND IN LIVINGSTON

Smithland, Nov. 24—Refractory fire clay has been found within sight of this place from four and a half feet to ten feet thick, and already about 10,000 pounds have been shipped to various clay workers for a test. It is said to be finer than the finest imported from other countries, and it is understood that Mr. Moody, the gentleman in charge here, has interested several capitalists and will build a plant either here or in Paducah, to manufacture high grade goods, such as crucibles, fire brick, tank blocks, and such things, and the proposed plant will have no opposition south of the Ohio river.

OIL IN CHRISTIAN COUNTY.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 24—The Sand Lick Development company that has several oil wells in North Christian county shot Well No 1 with nitroglycerine, reaching a fine flow of gas. Oil was also struck, but not in a large quantity. A stream of oil and gas was thrown 300 feet in the air. The Marretta Torpedo company did the shooting using about 150 quarts of the explosive.

DIED FROM SCISSORS WOUND.

Princeton, Ky., Nov. 24—Alonzo Johnson, colored, died from blood poisoning resulting from a wound in the knee inflicted by his wife, who in a fit of anger, threw the scissors at him. He worked on a farm, and when first taken ill claimed he injured himself while boring a hole in a cob pipe.

FIRE AT FOLSOMDALE.

Mayfield, Nov. 24—Will Madlock, who lived north of Folsomdale, this county lost his residence, which was burned to the ground Saturday while the family was absent. The loss will be about $800, with $500 insurance.

COLORED BOY KILLED.

Cadiz, Nov. 24—James Humphries, a 12 year old colored boy, was shot and killed near here by I. Chappell, also colored, who claims the shooting was accidental.

DEATH AT WINGO.

Wingo, Ky., Nov. 24—Tom E. Clark, aged 65 and a prominent citizen, died from liver trouble after a long illness, leaving a wife and five children. He was buried yesterday.

ALLEGED MURDERER

AQUITTED

Sturgis, Ky., Nov. 24—Clay Pemberton, who killed a farmer named Potts last year in this county over a cow, has been acquitted.

BEST LINIMENT ON EARTH.

I. M. McHany, Greenville, Tex., writes, Nov. 2, 1900: "I had rheumatism last winter, was down in bed six weeks; tried everything, but got no relief till a friend gave me a part of a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment. I used it, and got two more bottles. It cured me and I haven't felt any rheumatism since. I can recommend Snow Liniment to be the best liniment on earth for rheumatism." For rheumatic, sciatic or neuralgic pains rub in Ballard's Snow Liniment; you will not suffer long, but will be gratified with a speedy and effective cure. 25c, 50c and $1 at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

Originator of Postal Card Dead.

Priory Councilor Emanuel Hermann, who is said to have been the originator of the postal card, died in Vienna recently.

HARMLESS AS MILK

Look out what you put into the child's stomach! Children are especially sensitive to the action of medicine. But you need never fear Scott's Emulsion. That is one reason why it is so popular as a children's medicine.

"As harmless as milk"—that is saying a good deal. But we may go even further and say that Scott's Emulsion will stay on the child's stomach when milk will not.

A little added to the milk in baby's bottle and a little after meals for older children is just the right thing for the weak and sickly ones.

We'll send you a little to try if you like. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

MOST SUCCESSFUL.

ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS CLEARED AT THE CATHOLIC LIO BAZAAR.

The bazaar given at Third and Court streets three days last week by the ladies of the St. Francis sewing circle of the Catholic church was the most successful ever given in Paducah, and netted the ladies $1,000.

Most of the fine needlework, ornaments, decorations and other things on display were made by the ladies of the church, and lunch and dinner were served every day. The "country store" was also an attractive as well as profitable feature. The money realized will be devoted to the church debt.

In the raffles for various things a picture of Rev. Father H. W. Jansen, handsomely framed, was won by Mrs. Geo. Detzel; a barrel of flour by Mrs. John Dicke; a fine umbrella by Miss Clara Nichols, and a handsome piece of embroidery, made by Miss Elizabeth Sinnott, by Miss Frizz of Indianapolis, Ind. A diamond pendant was won by Don Gilbert; a piece of embroidery done by Mrs. George Tagg by James Hofflich; a handsome grape center piece, donated by Mrs. G. W. Robinson, by Preston Herring, and a handsome center piece, donated by Mrs. John Adkins, by Mrs. A. R. Grouse.

SMOKER TONIGHT.

THE TINNERS TO ENTERTAIN THEIR FRIENDS THIS EVENING.

The Tinnners' union will tonight give a smoker at Rodfus' hall on South Third street, and expect a large crowd. There will be refreshments and cigars, and the "bosses" will be guests of the members of the union.

Central Labor Union is now thinking of giving a social session every month, but has not yet acted on the proposition. The matter was at the last meeting deferred until the next meeting.

NOTHING RECEIVED YET.

Manager A. L. Joynes has not yet received any reply from the East Tennessee Telephone Co. in regard to his request for rates relative to the move of the merchants and professional men for cheaper service. A formal proposition is expected at any time, however, and when it comes there will be a meeting of the joint committee to pass on the two rates submitted.

A GOOD ONE.

"A Wise Woman," which has been secured for one night some time in the near future at The Kentucky, is headed by a young woman who for the past three years has been a member of Augustin Daly's company, and has attracted an amount of attention from the critics that rarely falls to so young an artist. The young lady referred to is Marie Lamour.

ARE NEARLY THROUGH.

Chairman Johnson of the ordinance committee of the council and Alderman Greif of the ordinance committee of the board of aldermen have passed on 140 of the revised ordinances and have only about sixty more to read before they will be ready for a report. They have held but three sessions, and expect to finish in another session.

ALLEGED CONSPIRATORS.

EXPRESS ROBBERY CASES COME UP AT HARTFORD TOMORROW.

Route Agent Charles A. Abbott, of the American Express company, has gone to Hartford, Ky., to testify in the trial of A. B. Schlietzbaum and J. H. Boatner, alleged principals in the express robbery in which Boatner claimed to have lost $28,000.

The latter was a stranger up about Fordsville, and has the express company receipt for a package alleged to contain $28,000. The other man was the company's agent and claimed to have been robbed of the money. The cases have attracted widespread attention.

Boatner has sued the company for $28,000 and both men are in jail unable to give $30,000 bonds for conspiracy to defraud.

LIGHTS OUT.

AND MUCH COMPLAINT MADE OF STREET OBSTRUCTIONS.

A great deal of complaint is being made of piles of brick, mortar beds, timber and other obstructions being left by contractors in the streets without danger lights. Either no lights are left or they blow or burn out.

On account of the crippled condition of the city electric plant, resulting from an armature burning out, many lights are out, which makes the dangers from such obstructions greater than they would otherwise be.

Dr. Reddick came near being injured a few nights ago by a pile of bricks in front of the new telephone company, and Dr. Otis and family, as told elsewhere, had a narrow escape last night.

NO RAISE EXPECTED

COAL WILL PROBABLY NOT GO UP ANY TIME SOON.

A local coal man stated today that there was no probability so far as he could learn, of an advance in coal at any time soon. There has been talk of further advance, but nothing done. "The Memphis and New Orleans market are the ones that affect the price here," he said, "and at present we are holding our own against them, and they are offering no more than we are and the prospects are will not. It is when they offer more, that we have to pay more for it at the mines, or allow it to be shipped further south."

MORMON CONFERENCE.

PREPARATION FOR A STATE MEETING AT LOUISVILLE.

A Mormon conference will be held in Louisville on November 26 at which President Benjamin E. Rich, of Cincinnati, president of the Middle States Mission, will preside. Two sessions will be held at 2:30 o'clock p. m. and 7:30 p. m. Twenty or twenty-five Mormon elders from Tennessee, Ohio and Kentucky are expected to be in attendance, and the conference will discuss the matter of state changes in their mission work.

WORM DESTROYER.

White's Cream Vermifuge not only kills worms, but removes the mucus, and slime in which they build their nests; it brings, and quickly, a healthy condition of the body, where worms cannot exist. 25c at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

ROCK BASS NOT HYBRIDS.

Reasons for Rejecting a Theory Recently Advanced About Them.

The theory recently advanced that the rock bass is the result of a cross between the black bass and the sun fish seems to be disproved by the rock bass that abound in Lake Keuka in western New York.

When the first white people settled on the shores of that lake more than a century ago they found the rock bass abundant in its waters. The black bass is an alien resident of the lake having been placed there within recent years.

The rock bass is one of the gamest fishes for its size that swim, and with its big staring red eyes, its enormous head and capacious mouth is one of the most ferocious-looking. While in Lake Keuka, where it seldom attains a greater weight than half a pound, it is regarded as a pest by black bass fishermen, because of its persistence in stealing bait. Its excellent qualities as a food fish commend it to the people of other localities, notably in Pennsylvania, where the State is rearing it extensively at the hatcheries and introducing it to the rivers and small lakes.

In the Pennsylvania waters, where it has begun to assert itself this season, the gamy little bass is welcomed by anglers as a provider of most enjoyable sport with the rod. The rock bass takes the fly readily, and makes a pretty fight on light trout tackle.

The Mayfield Messenger says that Colonel Sam Crossland abhors a bald head.

Colonel Sam Crossland, who is acting circuit judge, is getting quite particular in his declining years it declares. He is so nervous that when a baldheaded man goes in the court house and takes his seat his honor gets down off the bench and tells the man with a bald head that he can't stand to look at his pate and if he don't take it out he will fine him the usual $3 for contempt. And as a result of this ruling bald heads are few in his court.

"The Tide of Life," which was here Friday night, was one of the first productions in which Mr. Wm. Malone, for several years manager of the La Belle Park stock, and until last summer stage manager of the Kentucky, appeared. It was written by Ed Weitzell, dramatic critic on the Detroit Press, and when it was first started the scenery made for it in New York was so large that it couldn't be taken out of the house in which it was built. There was no way to get on the road, and it had to be torn down and rebuilt, laying the company off for three weeks. When they started with new scenery, the company lasted just two weeks, and then, as Mr. Malone expresses it, he had to go back to work.

One of the smoothest advertising tricks ever perpetrated in the history of advertising, no doubt, was the Chinese letter sent to every paper in the country a short time ago. It came in original and attractive shape and had genuine foreign stamps on it, and this together with the delusive wording and unique appearance, readily fooled a vast number of the papers. Some of the largest in the country published the latter and used it as a proof of their "large circulation," some papers even having engravings of it published on the front page. One or two of the big New York papers were roped in, and the papers that were not have given the concern considerable advertising by exposing the gullibility of those that were. Some shrewd American no doubt got up the thing, and his cleverness ought to entitle him to a large salary.

The Unionville, Ill., correspondent of the Metropolis Journal Republican, gives us the following breezy items in the last issue:

William Lawrence is baling hay for W. S. Harmon.

Clabe Reynolds feels better.

Oscar Henderson is on the sick list.

Gathering corn is the order of the day.

Randolph Roberts has almost completed J. H. Bigley's new barn.

Misses True and Vida Bigley called on Misses Dillard one day last week.

Bob and Matt Medley were happy callers at Henry Rixie's last Sunday.

Vester Rankin says he went over to Mrs. Jane Chalk's Friday night to tell Mrs. Chalk goodbye. But we think he called on Miss Annie.

Those who partook of wild goose last Saturday at J. W. Sharp's were Will Sharp Thomas Sharp and Peter Sharp. They all report a nice time.

Mr. Harry Davidson, the well known street car motorman, has been searching the Webster dictionary for coined word, and has about decided that the coining is too new to give the word prominence in the dictionary.

He was running a depot line car Saturday night and ran over an animal and thinking it was a dog he stopped his car to investigate. The animal proved to be a large opossum that had been split in two by the car wheels. A negro on the car came forward to inspect the mutilated body of his colors' favorite dish and exclaimed: "White man, dat sho' am some big 'possum, but dis heah cyah did sutlin' manachulate it so bad dat it am no count fo' cooking." Motorman Davidson hunted for the word several days before he came to the conclusion that the negro meant mutilated.

Lindo Murphy, who is accredited with being the king of Mayfield bootleggers, and was held over in the sum of $750 at the term of federal court here last week, seems to have a standing engagement in the Mayfield circuit court. Says the Mayfield Messenger:

The other day, while Judge Robbins was waiting for the attorneys in a certain case to get ready, and during a lull in the proceedings he said: "Well, while we are waiting let's try Lindo Murphy for something, and called a case of the commonwealth against Lindo Murphy for violating the option law, and called to Mr. Moorman, the commonwealth's attorney, and asked if he was ready; he answered, "Commonwealth is ready," when the judge said, "What say you, Mr. Murphy?" Lindo was sitting, about half asleep, but said, "I do not know what it is, but if it is me you are talking about, I am ready for trial." "Call the jury," said the judge to the clerk, and in less than no time the jury returned with a verdict fining him $100, when the judge remarked, "We will now go on with our regular business."

Lindo leaned back against the wall and was soon sound asleep, dreaming of a home "in the skies."

Whenever business gets a little dull in court, the judge calls a case against Lindo Murphy.

Ice Forms Around Iceland.
Reports from Iceland declare that the island is surrounded by mighty sheets of ice. All the firs on the north and east sides are packed with ice, and vessels are cut off from communication with the land. During the last hundred years the island has never before been so thickly circled with ice, and it is feared that the barrier may become ever greater in extent. If this should happen, there is a possibility of a famine and in any case the islanders will find a severe scarcity in many articles of food and utility. Meteorologists suppose that the extraordinary cold of this month arises from these colossal masses of ice around Iceland.

RHEUMATISM

Tortures, Cripples and Deforms.

Rheumatism does not treat all alike. Some suffer torture from the very beginning, the attack being so sudden, sharp and disastrous that they are made helpless cripples in a few days, while others feel only occasional twitches of pain in the knees, ankles, elbows and wrists, or the muscles of the legs, arms, back or neck; but this treacherous disease is only traveling by slower stages. The acid poisons are all the while accumulating in the blood, and muscles and joints are filling with corroding, acid matter, and when the disease tightens its grip and strikes with full force, no constitution is strong enough to withstand its fearful blows, and its victims are crippled and deformed, or literally worn out by constant pain. Rheumatism is caused by Uric Acid or some other irritating poison in the blood, and this is the cause of every variety and form of this dread disease. External remedies do not reach the blood, consequently do no lasting good.

S. S. S. goes directly into the circulation and attacks the disease itself. The acid poisons that cause the inflammation, soreness and swelling are neutralized and the blood purified and cleansed of all irritating matter, and nothing is left in the circulation to produce other attacks. S. S. S. being a vegetable remedy does not impair the digestion or general health like alkali and potash remedies, but builds up and invigorates the entire system, and at the same time makes a thorough and permanent cure of Rheumatism.

DIDN'T RECOGNIZE J. P. MORGAN

But the Financier Gave the Mechanic a Light from His Cigar.

J. Pierpont Morgan one morning last week stopped on the corner of two downtown streets and stood for a few moments waiting for a friend. In one hand he carried a silk umbrella, on which he leaned while he smoked a cigar, and with his head back gazed idly at the upper windows of a business block opposite.

The hurrying crowd passed along, giving him an occasional jostle, and one man who had the appearance of a mechanic stopped at the corner of the building just behind Mr. Morgan and tried to light his cigar, wasting several matches in a high wind. Turning away in disgust, he said: "Gimme a light, will you?"

"Certainly," said Mr. Morgan, and held his cigar in his hand while the other man puffed hard at his with the end against the lighted one.

The light secured, says the New York Mail and Express, he nodded his thanks, never lifting his eyes to the face of his obliging countryman. Mr. Morgan jerked his head in a "welcome" gesture, and both in that sixty-second's operation were an expression as grave as though a great problem were being considered.

A moment later the friend joined Mr. Morgan and they move along with the crowd.

KING EDWARD AND THE CHILDREN

Dignity of England's Monarch Once Seriously Threatened.

A few weeks ago his majesty, King Edward VII., paid a visit to his daughter, the duchess of Fife, at Brighton and, unfortunately, the little children were unusually peevish and tiresome—in fact, they seemed utterly oblivious of the fact that their august grandfather had come to pay them a visit.

"The little ones are rather hard to please to-day, are they not?" remarked his majesty somewhat good-naturedly; for he is very fond of his daughter's children.

"Indeed, they are!" replied the duchess, with a sigh. "I don't know what's come over them."

"Now," said King Edward, "what can I do to amuse them before I go?" Her royal highness immediately grasped the situation.

"Oh," she said, "how good of you! They love skipping, and if you would not mind skipping with them for half an hour in the garden they would be so delighted!"

His majesty afterwards related the story to the prince of Wales, and, with a twinkle in his eye, remarked: "I certainly skipped, but not in the garden."

Two Startling Suggestions.

It is rather startling to find that all the most effusive signs of affection in use to-day are nothing more or less than relics of barbarism—a modified form of attack. Such, at least, is the opinion of "Student" (Oxford), who claims to be an authority on the subject.

"Take, for example," he says, "a kiss. What is it but a pretence to bite? It is an action plainly intended to convey the meaning: 'I could bite you, you see, but I won't.'"

"In the same way the playful pats and slaps which a lover gives to his sweetheart are obviously a mimicry of blows, regarded simply as privileged marks of endearment. When he clasps her in his arms it is the sense of capture which thrills him, and of being captured which thrills her."—London Tit-Bits.

MIX POLITICS AND SOCIETY.

Feature of English Life Fortunately Lacking in America.

A writer in the Cosmopolitan calls attention to a striking difference between American and British society which is evident to everyone acquainted with both countries. That is the strong influence of society on government and politics in Great Britain and its almost total lack of such influence in America. In England the king, while practically stripped of constitutional dictatorship in even the smallest governmental matters, exercises a great influence through his position as a leader of society. The cabinet minister who is so unfortunate as to displease him or set himself directly against his will may always be visited with social ostracism, and there are very few men in public life to-day to whom this would not be a serious matter. For social ostracism has a way of descending even to the third and fourth generation and the man who is able to rise above such seemingly petty considerations when applied only to himself can hardly be willing to see his wife and daughters, to whom society necessarily means more, suffer. In the United States, on the other hand, the presidents have, as a rule, been men who either cared not at all for society or were entirely happy in their own circle of friends and disliked the displays and worries entailed by what the daily press calls "social position." The American woman of the smart set rather prides herself on her ignorance of political conditions and shows a complete indifference even at the time of a presidential election. In Great Britain society and politics are allied.

GOT HIS COAT OF ARMS.

Applicant Able to Prove His Descent From Royalty.

The fruit that grows on the genealogical tree is generally dry, but occasionally has a flavor of humor. "Sylvanus Urban" tells in the Cornhill Magazine a story which is good enough to perpetuate. One need not question its authenticity too closely.

A man applied to the herald's college for a coat of arms. In such case it is pleasant to be able to borrow one from a celebrated ancestor. The man in question could not remember anything about his great-grandparents and, therefore, of course, could not mention any achievement by them which could be used as a basis of a coat of arms. But the official to whom he applied was not easily discouraged.

"Have you not done something yourself?" he asked.

"Nothing, I fear," said the man, adding as a pathetic antithesis that once, having been locked in Ludgate prison for debt, he had found means to escape from an upper window.

"And how did you get down?"

"I got a cord, fixed it around the neck of King Lud's statue, and let myself down."

"Just the thing! There you have it—honor enough. Lineally descended from King Lud. His coat of arms is good enough for you."

GRAVES OF ANCIENT RACE.

Prehistoric Remains Exposed by the Freshets in Tennessee.

Floods that prevailed in Tennessee recently washed up what had been called an old Indian graveyard. Scientists, however, who have given their critical attention to the find are now inclined to the opinion that it was the resting place of prehistoric men, the mound builders.

The graves were very deep. The green knoll under which they rested gave no evidence of covering such gruesome relics. There has been no indication of a graveyard in the locality within the memory of the present inhabitants and no record of it in history. Before the flood the field was worth $60 an acre and produced fourteen bales of cotton.

But this year the creek spread over the bottoms as never before, causing much destruction. The soil was swept away in the torrent, and when the water finally receded there were left exposed twelve graves. Some evidently were the graves of adults and some the graves of children.

Now, these graves were evidently not the remains of Indians. They gave evidence that the dead had been buried there with much care, while the Indians were wont simply to wrap a blanket about the body and lay it in a shallow grave.

HOW TO DRAW A CORK.

It Can Be Done With Common Piece of Sealing-wax.

If you want to amuse friends at a picnic, or have left the corkscrew at home, as usually happens, tell them that you can draw a cork out of any bottle without a corkscrew. Of course they will laugh, but very soon it will be your turn to smile.

Take a piece of sealing-wax and hold one end of it over a lighted match until it becomes soft; then let some drops of the wax fall on the cork in the bottle. As soon as the cork is covered with wax you must press the piece which you hold in your hand against the cork, and you must hold it there until the wax is quite dry. Then it will be easy for you to draw out the cork by using the stick of wax which adheres to it, in the same manner as you would use a screw.

No matter how firmly fixed the cork may be, it will almost immediately yield to the pressure. You must, however, take care not to wrench the stick of wax away from the bottle you are drawing it out, and you must see that the cork is perfectly dry before you put any wax on it.

A LIGHT STEP.

No woman can afford to ignore her shoes unless she hands in her resignation to polite society. For her shoes determine her walk, and her walk decides her style, her carriage, her posture, her whole attitude and bearing as she moves about. A lady's shoe should always be light in weight and very flexible to the foot to enable her to walk in an easy and graceful manner. This is the especial charm that has made Queen Quality shoes so popular. They are trim and neat in shape as so many other shoes are, but they go farther than this—farther than any shoe—in actually creating an elastic, graceful step which is worth ten years of youthfulness to a middle-aged woman. Patent welts $3.50, all others $3.00.

THE WEATHER.

Rain and warmer tonight. Tuesday fair and cooler in the west portion.

MOTION MEANS MONEY.

These are times when action is money. The man who lags is going to get left. The procession is swift, and you must keep up with the procession. In the shops of one of the big railroads are placards bearing words quoted from the recent address of the president, "Motion means money." It expresses the secret of the success of all the moneyed men of today. There are a great many rich men in the United States, but the richest are those who worked and made the nucleus of their fortunes. John D. Rockefeller, the richest man in the world, who does not even know, because of its enormous size, how large his daily income is, was not many years ago a pauper. He is now richer than all the Rothschilds put together, and there are about forty of them. John W. Gates, who plays with millions as other men play with dollars, is still a hard worker. He says in a reply to the question how to be successful, that it is by attending to your own business and working sixteen hours a day if necessary. He says further: "Attend strictly to your own business; keep well posted as to your competitors' methods and profits; agree with your competitors rather than fight them; make hay while the sun shines; always discount your own bills; never try to deceive your banker; never neglect your business for pleasure."

A howl is being raised by some of the Democratic papers, which are always trying to make it appear that wages are too low, because the railroads are raising rates. The Democratic press is a funny thing to watch. Railroads claim they pay as liberal wages as they can afford, but every once and awhile they have to make a raise whether they lose by it or not, and lately many of them have voluntarily raised wages. The latter move may have been an act of philanthropy, but it is more reasonable to presume that it was done because some of the far-seeing officials perceived that it would be forced on them sooner or later and they could make a point in their favor by doing it voluntarily. So they did it. But where are they to make up these additional hundreds of thousands of dollars a month that they will now have to pay out? Railroads are owned and run by human beings, who doubtless value a dollar as highly as anyone else. When they have to pay more to operate their roads they are naturally going to charge more, and in the end it is the people who have to pay the freight. One man seems to have as much right to want higher pay as another. If the railroad man has to be paid more the railroad has to collect more, and the shippers they collect from have to pay more and likewise charge more, and the people who consume what the railroads ship and what the shipper sells have to pay more. The man who is always howling "higher wages" is usually the one who squirms the quickest when the higher wages hit either directly or indirectly his own pocketbook.

in the opinion of many competent judges, prove beneficial to any state that will establish such a judicial system. It is proposed to introduce an amendment to the state constitution providing for the appointment of all judges of the supreme, appellate and circuit courts, instead of their election, the judges to hold for life or during their good behavior. It has long been held that if civil judges were appointed for life, as they are in the federal courts, the enormous cost of the state courts to the taxpayers would be gratifyingly reduced. A judge who feels secure in his job, and does not have to trust to politics and the various elements that compose it, and whose varied interests have to be humored, if not served, can transact business in a much more expeditious manner than one who has to appease the various interests at conflict, and who may allow attorneys representing powerful influences and people to sway him because he deems it "politic" to yield. This is not true in many courts, no doubt, and cannot always be called a corrupt state of affairs where it does exist, but it is very pernicious in its effect on the taxpayers to have cases drag from year to year through the courts instead of being expeditiously disposed of as they are in the federal courts, where the judge is free from all political incumbrances and dispatches business as it ought to be dispatched in every court, whether federal or civil, in the country.

Beckham seems to have the other gubernatorial candidates in his party on the run, and they are talking of taking out an injunction to prevent his name going either on the ballots, should a primary be decided on, or before the convention, should a convention be called. The truth is, apparently, that their only hope is in having him declared ineligible. Beckham will have the best of it any way you look at it. If a primary is decided on, unless the vote shuts most of the candidates out, it will be the field against Beckham, with a probability that he can beat any of them, as the opposition vote will be divided while his will be solid. If a convention is called he will probably be able to control, it as he has a pretty good machine built up in the state, and the machine usually has out its men at the little conventions, while the others stay at home, and runs things to suit itself when the big convention comes off. Beckham seems to have the others faded, and the talk of taking out an injunction indicates that they realize it.

The following, from the Metropolis Journal-Republican, applies to Paducah as well as elsewhere: "It is a great mistake, made by many people, to assume that cities grow like mushrooms or jimson weeds. Cities are built; and it takes the well directed energy and well spent money of men and women to do it. If we should sit down and fold our hands waiting for our city to 'grow,' which seems to be the policy of some of our people, it would not be many years till we found ourselves at the tip end of prosperity's caudal appendage, in danger of being flipped off the earth at with every swing thereof. All men of business and affairs know that it requires a constant struggle to hold even what one has, to say nothing of increasing it; so with communities, they must either go forward or go backward; there is no ground this side of the New Jerusalem where they can hope to cease from striving and still live."

A Louisville judge has rendered an important judgment in an insurance case. He holds that on account of the limited means and often intelligence of those who carry industrial insurance, the companies are bound by what the agents say when they take applications for policies no matter what the policy itself may say. The case was one in which the policy on the life of a child was invalidated, according to a clause in the policy, if other insurance was taken out for the same person. The agent told the parents of the insured that this would make no difference and the court decides that the statements of the agent bound the company to pay the policy no matter what the policy said, and that insurance companies must have honest, truthful agents or abide by the result.

The Owensboro street car company probably thinks there is nothing like beating 'em to it. It has filed suit against the owner of a wagon for allowing the big, destructive vehicle to strike one of their frail little cars. This should be a warning to the citizens of that place not to run in to any of their cars, for in addition to having to pay the owner's bill, they might hands. The city officials should remember one thing, and that is that no city can work under two charters, transacting a part of its business under the third class charter and a part under the second class charter. If it could be otherwise there would be no occasion for having the distinction of charters in city governments.

Some of the councilmen who not long ago filed a suit to prevent Paducah working under the second class charter are now talking of filing another suit to compel her to follow out the provisions of this same charter. A short time can often work some marvelous changes.

The latter are urged to come to this meeting whether they belong to the Federation or not, and are assured that they will be welcome.

REV. NEWELL COMES HERE.

HE WILL BE TRANSFERRED FROM DYERSBURG TO THE CITY.

Mr. George Roth of 415 Jackson street, who has been sick, is better today, his many friends will be pleased to learn.

Lost Rivers of Idaho. One of the most singular features in the scenery of the Territory of Idaho is the occurrence of dark, rocky chasms, into which creeks and large streams suddenly disappear and are never more seen. The fissures of old lava channels produced by the outside of the mass cooling and forming a tube, which, when the fiery stream was exhausted, has been left empty, while the roof of the lava duct, having at some point fallen in, presents there the opening into which the river plunges and is lost. At one place along the Snake river valley one of these rivers appears gushing from a cleft high up in basaltic walls, where it leaps into a cataract into the torrent below. Where the stream has its origin or at what point it is swallowed up is absolutely unknown, although it is believed that its sources are a long way up in the north country. Besides becoming the channels of streams the lava conduits are frequently found impacted with the ice masses which never entirely melt.

CLAIMED SATAN AS A KINSMAN

Young Wife's Efforts to Reform Husband Proved a Failure.

A story is submitted concerning a young Philadelphia matron whose husband Nature never intended for a drinking man, so that very little wine affected him, and very little more acted as a deliriant. While understanding that nothing of viciousness inspired his indulgence, she grieved none the less for the loss of his society on evenings; he came home late usually befuddled, and the mornings found him too ill to be sociable. Her plan to cure him was primitive, to say the least. A Mephistopheles costume belonging to her brother was kept in readiness. The uncertainty of his walk and the incoherent mumbling that accompanied his accent told her he was at his worst; so, when he reached his bedroom, she leaped out in the dim light, struck an attitude after Edouard de Reszke, and said in her deepest contralto: "Come! Satan calls you! I am he!" "Satan, eh? Zat-zat so?" hiccupped the husband. "Well, ole boy, s-s-shake hands! We're brothers-a-law! I married your sister!"

London's Largest School. The Jews' Free School, Spitalfields, is the largest school not only in London, but on earth. There are forty-four class-rooms for boys and twenty-seven for girls, and there are 2,200 boys and 1,300 girls in attendance. Each room is fitted as completely as modern invention can make it. The fact that the school has never been closed owing to the spreading of any epidemic attests the sanitary perfection of its structure.

HE DISLIKED GEORGE ELIOT.

Autocratic Ways of Famous Authoress Made an Enemy.

When George Eliot was still Miss Evans, and before she had begun to write novels, she used to frequent an old book shop on the Strand, where she left a very unfavorable impression on one young man who was at that time an assistant in John Chapman's shop. His description of her is that of a remarkably ugly young woman of universal knowledge, whose delight it was to use the Socratic method in conversation, but without the Socratic benevolence of intention. The result was that the young men at the dining table (the shop had a boarding house for its employees and guests) who heedlessly hazarded an opinion, were very soon made to feel not only that they knew nothing of the subject under discussion, but that they knew very little indeed of anything. Now, a young man does not relish being badgered and made a fool of by a pretty woman, but it is intolerable to be sat upon by an ugly one—at least such was the feeling of our informant, and one consequence of this treatment was that in after years, when Miss Evans had become George Eliot, one man could never persuade himself to read "Adam Bede," or to admit that the author was other than a very intolerant person and an intolerable intellectual prig.—Harper's Weekly.

MADE HARD WORK FOR SERVANT

Warned the Colonel That His Yarns Were Too Strong.

A certain colonel somewhere in the south (no matter where) was in the habit of telling yarns and greatly exaggerating. He had a negro servant who corroborated everything his master told. One day the colonel had some gentlemen to dinner, and they were enjoying some fine venison very much. The colonel said: "Yes, I went hunting the other day and saw a fine buck. I took a good sight at him and shot him through the head and the bullet went through his hind leg." The gentlemen looked at each other a little mystified. The negro scratched his head and at last said: "Yes, indeed, gemmen, just as massa raised the gun to shoot de buck he raise his hind leg and scratch his ear, and the bullet went through the head and right through de hind leg." The gentlemen looked more satisfied. After the guests had left the negro said to his master, "Gorry mighty, massa, next time you tell one of dem yarns do get de ends closter togedder. I had hard work to make both ends meet."

DID NOT SAVE MUCH.

Close-Fisted Old Gentleman Had Met His Match.

A close-fisted old gentleman lost his dog, and let it be known that he might give a dollar for the return of the same.

A few days later the dog was brought back to the owner, who presented the finder with a quarter. "Here! What's this?" demanded the man. "You promised me a dollar if I found the dog."

"Nay, friend," said the Quaker, "what I said was that I might give thee a dollar. Now I'm thinking that a quarter is sufficient. What dost thou think?"

What the man thought he didn't say just then. Within a week, however, the careful Quaker had lost his dog again.

Having a shrewd suspicion where the animal was, the owner hunted up the original finder and asked him if he had seen anything of it. The reply was distinctly non-committal.

"I'm thinking," grinned the man, "that thou hast soon lost thy dog again, friend. What dost thou think?"

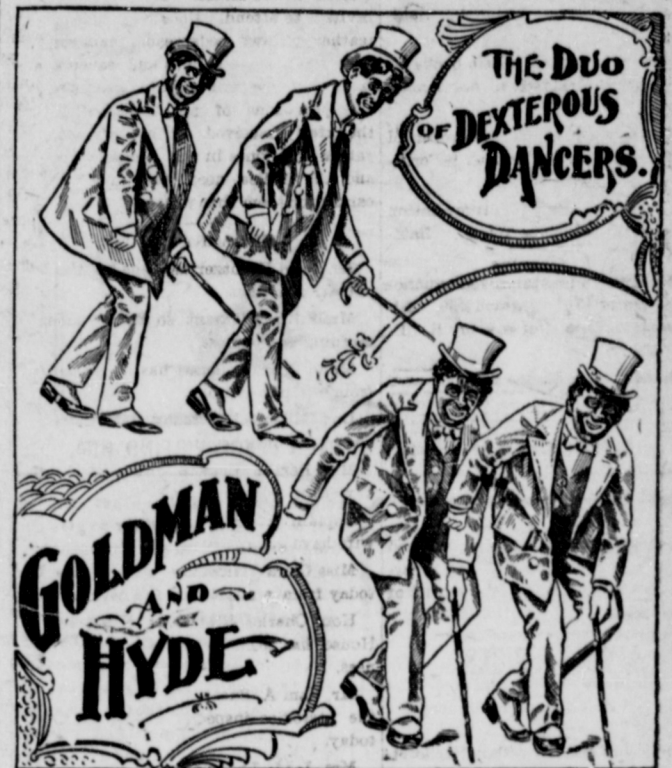

Ultimately the old gentleman recovered his dog again, but it cost him $5 in all.

Temperance Lesson.

It cannot be denied that the Illinois woman who shot and killed her husband under the impression that he was a burglar when he returned home drunk at 2 o'clock in the morning and began to smash things has struck upon an argument that if widely employed will go far toward solving the temperance question.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

STRUCK BRICKS

Narrow Escape of Dr. Otis Last Night.

Wife and Baby Thrown out of His Buggy by Striking an Obstruction.

Dr. L. J. Otis, of the Battle creek sanitarium, wife and baby, narrowly escaped serious injury last night about 7 o'clock while driving on Ninth, between Court and Washington streets.

Dr. Otis had just left home and was driving south on Ninth street when he encountered a brick pile near the middle of the street. The night was dark and no electric light was burning. The brick pile was not supplied with a warning light and the doctor was unable to see. He was driving rapidly when the obstruction was struck and all three occupants of the vehicle were thrown to the ground. Mrs. Otis was badly bruised about the forehead and the baby was slightly injured, but neither seriously. The horse stopped as soon as the buggy struck and the vehicle escaped damage except from slight scar on the wheels.

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR CATARRH.

JUST BREATHE HYOMEI FOUR TIMES A DAY AND BE CURED.

If a few years ago some one had said you can cure catarrh by breathing air charged with a healing balsam the idea would have been ridiculed, and it remained for R. T. Booth, that eminent investigator, to discover in Hyomei this method for cure.

Hyomei has performed the most miraculous cures of catarrh and is today recognized by leading members of the medical profession as the only advertised remedy that can be relied upon to do just what it claims.

The complete outfit of Hyomei costs but $1 and consists of an inhaler, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei.

Breathe Hyomei through the inhaler for a few minutes four times a day, and it will cure the worst case of catarrh. It soothes and heals the mucous membrane of the air passages, prevents irritation and effects a complete and lasting cure.

The treasurer of the American Life Insurance company, J. S. Nugent, of New York city, writes: "Hyomei has completely cured my daughter of catarrh from which she has been a sufferer for years."

In this city there are scores of well known people who say they have been cured of catarrh by Hyomei. If it does not cure you, your druggist will return the money you paid for Hyomei. This is the strongest evidence that can be offered as to his faith in the remedy.

SAD DEATHS.

POPULAR YOUNG LADY OF METROPOLIS VICTIM OF TYPHOID.

Miss Robbie Evers, a popular young lady of Metropolis, Ill., who frequently visited Paducah, died Saturday evening from typhoid fever at her home there. She was a daughter of Sheriff Evers and contracted the disease after nursing her brother through a siege of it. Her mother is now very ill from it. She had many friends in Paducah who regretted very much to hear of her death. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon, and the Misses Bleich of the city, are there to attend.

Mr. W. J. Mason, age 70, died this morning shortly before noon of general debility at his home on Jefferson street between Third and Fourth streets. He had lived here for many years and leaves no near relatives. He was a gun and locksmith by trade and was well known. COFFEE PUTS UP A GRAND FIGHT.

Among the best of judges of good things in the food line is the groceryman or his wife. They know why many of their customers purchase certain foods.

The wife of a groceryman in Carthage, N. Y., says: "I have always been a lover of coffee, and therefore drank a great deal of it. About a year and a half ago I became convinced that it was the cause of my headaches and torpid liver and resolved to give it up, although the resolution caused me no small struggle, but Postum came to the rescue. From that time on coffee has never found a place on our table, except for company, and then we always feel a dull headache throughout the day for having indulged."

"When I gave up coffee and commenced the use of Postum I was an habitual sufferer from headache. I now find myself entirely free from it, and what is more, have regained my clear complexion, which I had supposed was gone forever."

"I never lose an opportunity to speak in favor of Postum, and have induced many families to give it a trial, and they are invariably pleased with it." Name given by Postum

EQUAL PARTNERS

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1901, by Charles W. Hooke.

From this youthful frame of mind he passed to one more mature and practical.
It might be that Blair was not worthy of this confidence. Without pretending to know what Elsie's secret might be, Kendall surely did not wish it to be betrayed. All consideration of abstract justice had vanished in personal interest. He was for Elsie with a genuine loyalty, and Blair had not impressed him favorably. He seemed a morose and discontented man, with an unsatisfied craving for something,
probably money, and he had not a perfectly honest eye. Supposing that Elsie's secret involved Alden and that Alden had really become rich in a way invisible to his closest friends—well, in that case it might be that Dr. Blair would be able to afford a better office.

With these thoughts in mind Kendall ventured to caution Elsie against the evils incident to an unwise trust in the discretion and the promises of one's fellow creatures, but Elsie seemed to have an excellent opinion of her own good judgment, as often happens with the young.

When Blair appeared, Kendall mentioned to him that Elsie desired to see him alone for a few minutes, adding,

"I was not aware you made it a matter of conscience."

"She seems to have some communication which is in the highest degree confidential."

"I shall treat whatever she says as a matter between doctor and patient,"
replied Blair, somewhat too promptly,
as Kendall thought.

Nothing of importance occurred during the time when Brenda and Kendall
were present with Blair in Elsie's room.
It might have been one of the doctor's regular professional calls.

The private conference lasted not more than five minutes, and it produced no very notable effect upon Elsie, but Dr. Blair seemed to have received a considerable surprise. Kendall was far from satisfied with the man's looks. He was not only agitated, but he had the air of one who is both scared and pleased, like a man who sees an opportunity the nature of which both attracts and frightens him.
And the thought came to Kendall that this secret might affect Brenda, whose father was very weak in the nerves
and very strong in the pocket.

On the face of the matter, however,
it appeared that Elsie had achieved a notable success, for Blair said to Brenda:
"Miss Miller tells me that you are much disturbed by the absurd attempts to identify you with the so-called 'mysterious woman' in this unfortunate affair. I think I can put a stop to these stories."

"Was it for that that she asked you to come here?" demanded Brenda, who,
by Elsie's request, had not been informed in advance of this attempt.

"Oh, no; it was merely incidental," replied Blair, "and my conclusion depends partly upon my having seen you again. Your word should, of course, have been enough for me, but I have not taken a proper view of the seriousness of the matter. I shall now state positively that you are not the lady I saw."

"I would prefer that you say nothing at all," said Brenda after a brief interval of reflection.

Blair showed his surprise.

"I do not understand," he said.

"Surely you wish me to speak the truth?"

"I was not aware that you made it a matter of conscience," replied Brenda, slightly inclining her head by way of dismissal to Blair, who was upon the point of leaving the room.

CHAPTER XIV.
"THIEF, HORATIO, THIEF."
THE next morning's papers contained interviews with Dr. Blair
in which he stated in the most positive manner that the mysterious woman was not Miss MacLane. This
did not have the effect of taking Brenda entirely out of print, but it inspired all the newspaper writers with caution, for, though some of them were not able to believe that Blair was telling the truth, it was impossible to overlook the fact that he was the only witness.

The most serious of the immediate results of this publication was experienced by Dr. Blair himself about 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when he received a call from Captain Neale. The captain seemed not to be representing the department upon this occasion, for he was in the dress of a private citizen.
Even his shoes were different from a policeman's characteristic footwear.
As the apparel evidently was not worn for purposes of disguise, it might be assumed that Mr. Neale had come upon a personal errand.

When admitted to Dr. Blair's office,
he first showed interest in all the doors opening from the room; then he bestowed a moment's attention upon some of the doctor's effects which had been collected as if to be packed in a large trunk.

"Going away?" inquired Neale.

"Move," responded Blair.

"What for?"

"You've succeeded in spoiling my practice around here," was the reply.
"I am not more modest than other doctors, but the kind of conspicuousness which comes from having a uniformed policeman call at the house every ten minutes is not a good advertisement.
So I have engaged other quarters."

"Where?"

"I would like to tell you that it's none of your business," said Blair, "but that wouldn't prevent you from finding out.
I'm going up town."

And he gave the address, which the captain ostentatiously noted down.
Having done this, he looked Blair in the eye and said:

"I don't know whether you're going or not."

"Make your mind easy," replied the doctor. "I am."

"You're an important witness in this case," said the captain, "and I want you where I can get my hands on you."
"Well, I'm not going far."

The captain screwed up his queer eyebrows in his own peculiar fashion.

"It's my opinion," said he, "that you're going to the house of detention."

Blair looked uneasy, but he mustered a smile.

"The house of detention is for the poor," he said. "It is for people who will stand being imprisoned six months or a year for nothing without making any fuss about it."

"You're poor enough, my friend," replied the captain, "and I'll see that you don't make any fuss. I've got a story all fixed up that will keep you quiet."

Blair let the lid of the trunk fall heavily and then sat down on top of it.
"Well, you needn't tell me what it is,"
he said. "I'll take your word for it that it's a good one. In short, you intend to ruin me in this town."

The captain put his hand into his pocket in a way that made Blair nervous, but it was nothing more formidable than a piece of chewing tobacco that appeared. Neale nodded slowly as he bit off a piece.

"From the beginning of this case,"
said the doctor, "I have been totally unable to understand your game. What is it?"

"My game," replied the captain, "is to take good care of Joseph Neale."

"Well," said Blair, "what have I done to prevent it?"

"Ever hear the story of the beggar
who asked the professional charity man for a dime?"

"I don't remember it," said the doctor.

"The charity man said: 'Go over on the other side of the street. I'm working this side.'"

Blair appeared to ponder deeply upon the significance of this ancient tale in the present situation.

"Look here," said the captain suddenly. "You saw Brenda MacLane coming out of that house, and you had sense enough to keep still until you found out where she stood. That was all right. You found out, right away, what kind of a father she had, and you knew that your information was worth money. Now, don't jump. I've looked you up, and I've found out that you're not above that sort of thing. Very well; few of us are, but when you found out that I was 'on' you ought to have done one of two things—quit or let me in."

Blair drummed on the trunk with his fingers.

"I thought you were after Alden," he said.

"I'm after 'em both."

"Do you still believe there's anything in Alden's story of money?" queried
Blair, eying the other shrewdly.

Neale nodded emphatically.

"But we'll leave that for a minute,"
he said. "In the matter of MacLane I let you go on, merely showing you that I was keeping close track. I didn't suppose you'd jump so quick."

"What do you mean?"

The captain shook a big forefinger in Blair's face.

"You went to MacLane's house last evening," he said. "Then you gave out that interview." And the big forefinger came very close to Blair's nose as the captain added, "How much did you get?"

Blair's lean and deeply lined face was suddenly moistened with perspiration. He sprang up sideways from the trunk and walked around the far end of the table.

"This is getting personal," he said at last, with a nervous laugh that scarcely passed beyond a contortion of the lips.

"I'll make it personal for you, my friend," he said. "In fact, I'll land you behind the bars before I'm done with you. This is blackmail."

Blair laughed aloud.

"Blackmail is a dreadful sin," he said, "and nobody knows it better than you do."

Neale did not see fit to reply. He watched Blair carefully as the latter paced up and down gnawing his lips.

"Captain," said the doctor, pausing suddenly and facing about, "how much money can you raise?"

Neale's eyebrows took the shape of inverted V's, and beneath them his eyes looked like dots because of the contraction in the corners.

"What are you trying to get at?" he demanded. "You mean something.
What is it?"

A sudden shivering seized Blair, so that his jaws could be seen to shake.
Indeed they could be heard. He crossed to a locker on the wall, from which he took a small bottle containing a thick and dark fluid. This he raised to his lips, shuddering at the taste of it. But he seemed to be benefited in the matter of self command.

"Nerve medicine?" said Neale. "I don't think you need it."

"You told me," replied Blair slowly,
"that I ought to quit or let you in. I've decided to do the latter."

"Right!" said the captain, with emphasis. "How much did you get?"

"The little money that I got from MacLane doesn't amount to anything," responded Blair. "I got something better."

Neale stretched out his hand with a quick motion and laid it upon Blair's shoulder, to that individual's great surprise, for he thought himself far out of reach. They stared at each other with equal intensity.

"Can you be square?" said Blair as if he were consulting an oracle and not the man at whom he was looking. "Is there any way to make you? I believe there is. And you've got the money too."

"I've always got plenty of money for a good thing," said Neale. "Now, speak up. Did Alden tell MacLane?"

Blair shook off the hand upon his shoulder by the exercise of great agility, and then he strode across the room to a desk, from which he took a small blankbook and a stylographic pen. He opened the book upon the table and wrote his name on the first page, with a word or two after it; then he looked at Neale, holding the pen toward him.
The captain nodded, and he also wrote in the book. Upon the page there then appeared this:

ARTHUR GEORGE BLAIR, } Equal Partners.
JOSEPH NEALE, }

"My friend," said the captain, "you ask me if I can be square. Well, there ain't nobody that can be square
than what I can, and you'll find that out if you stick to me and don't try to get funny nor play no tricks."

If Blair's acquaintance with Neale had been more intimate, he would have recognized sincerity in this redundancy of negatives. The reporters who have followed Neale's career assert that he once put seven into one short sentence while engaged in denouncing a certain well known reformer. As a rule, however, his language was not grossly inaccurate. In this instance it was the ring of the words that appealed to Blair. He took up the book and wrote upon the page that bore the names, his position being such that the captain could not see what was set down.

"Now, my esteemed business associate," said Blair, laying down the book—"this is the English of the matter—Alden has told MacLane where he was that afternoon and MacLane has told me. I didn't go up there to get the secret; I went for a little cold money. Circumstances had made it agreeable to me to put Miss MacLane
out of this case, and as I was going to do it anyhow it occurred to me that I might as well be paid for it."

"It's a pleasure to be in business with a man like you," said Neale, with a grin. "How much was the touch?"

"Only $2,000," replied Blair. "It is a loan. I told him a pitiful story of misfortune and mentioned that I was being hounded by the police. Well, he's had a little of that himself. He sympathized with me, and when I said
I wanted to move, take a better office and all that he very kindly consented to help me out. As to his daughter, I told him frankly that I believed she was the woman I had seen, but that I had no idea she was directly concerned in the crime. I believed that she had gone to that house, had seen

give out that interview which you saw in the papers this morning until I was sure Alden was innocent."

"Clever rascal!" said Neale.

"It was a sudden inspiration with me, I'll admit," responded Blair, "but it worked. Of course I was a long while getting at the facts, for at first he wanted me to take his word, which I gently but firmly declined to do.
Then, in the strictest confidence, he told me what I'm going to tell you now."

"This is a big thing," he continued, his face suddenly growing pale. "I'm afraid you can't raise the money to swing it, for it can't be done without money. That's why I'm laying myself open to you. It had to be somebody, and the devil sent you in."

"I'm obliged to him," said Neale.
"Go on."

"Mr. Alden spent the critical time that afternoon," said Blair, "in the office of a gentleman named Marcellus Hobson. Ever hear of him?"

"Lawyer?"

"One of the smartest trust lawyers
in this country and a man worth millions," said Blair. "And this is what Alden was doing there: He has organized a combination of the companies in his line of business."

"Alden has?" exclaimed Neale, amazed.

"Yes, sir," responded Blair. "That man Alden, the head of a little, tottering concern that is on the edge of bankruptcy, has got all the big fellows in line, and he stands to win millions in the closing of the deal. It's pouring money into this deal that has put his own business where it is. He must win now or go to total ruin."

"Well, what's going to stop him?"
demanded Neale eagerly. "Where do we come in?"

"He's rounded them all up except the Holbein Manufacturing company of Newark," said Blair. "Without that company in, the thing breaks and Alden goes to smash. But on the day when he sent that note to Miss Miller, on the day when she was stabbed, Alden got a verbal agreement with the president of the Holbein company which practically clinched the thing. It clinched it except for just one chance
—there's an option out on the Holbein
business. Some time ago a combination was made to buy the works, and a legal option was taken. The price is $600,000, of which one-third must be paid in cash four days from this present date or the option is forfeited. It will be forfeited. John Y. Bowen, the banker, who was at the head of the combination, has died, and the whole thing has fallen through. The option is in the hands of Bowen's son, who has been trying to push the thing along, but has now dropped it. We must buy that option."

"Why doesn't Alden buy it?"

"He is making a gamble. If the option lapses, he can get the concern for half a million. The Holbein people know nothing of the trust scheme.
They think Alden merely represents capital seeking an investment. They are all old men in the company and willing to sell out. But if new capital and new men get hold of the concern
it can be forced into Alden's trust on a valuation of a clean million, and there's a profit of $400,000 for us."

Neale twisted a newspaper into rags
with his gigantic hands.

"This thing needs investigating," he said, "and there isn't much time."

"Investigating?" echoed Blair. "If old Duncan MacLane says it's all right,
do you suppose there's any doubt about it?"

"Why doesn't he buy in?" queried
Neale and then answered his own question. "I see. He can't. He's got it confidential from Alden. It wouldn't do for him to show up with the property. But you're talking big money, and we mustn't go too fast."

"Don't you see," said Blair, speaking slowly, but in a voice thick with excitement, "that all we've got to do is to buy the option? Show up with that on the day before it expires, and you'll never have to put up the $200,000 of purchase money. You'll only have to prove that you can. Alden will have to settle at your own figures. If he does not, his game is up. By heavens, we can take more than half the profits of this transaction right out of his hands."

"But where'll Alden get the money to settle with us?" demanded the captain.

"We can't take no promises."

"That option closes the deal," said Blair. "With the deal closed, Alden can command all the money he wants,
for the thing will go right into the hands of a trust company to be financed."

"Then why hasn't Alden bought the option himself? You say it's a gamble!"

"Not altogether that. Young Bowen, so MacLane said, hates Alden and has a suspicion of what's up. He has turned down certain parties because he suspected Alden was back of them. But you can bring him to terms. All he'll want to know is that you don't represent Alden."

"If it's old John Y. Bowen's son," said Neale, with a smile, "I reckon I can fetch him. I happen to have a hitch or two there. He's a pretty lively boy."

"Then the thing is as good as done,"
responded Blair.

Neale took a turn around the room.

"I'll go and see Bowen this afternoon," he said, "and if this thing works I'll make Alden holler. I'm no friend of his after that little affair the other day. This will cut that honeymoon journey of his down a trifle, I'm thinking, when little Elsie Miller gets well.
By the way, Blair, you owe me a thousand."

2½ Tons will heat your home comfortably with a FAVORITE HEATER.

Even if hard coal costs $10 per ton it would be cheaper for you in the Favorite Base Burner than $6 coal in other makes. This is a positive fact and Scott, the stove dealer, will prove it to you or refund your money. It beats using soft coal at any price.

It beats using gas and we all know about using gas in zero weather.

All people have been more or less worried on the fuel subject. The Favorite Base Burner will positively settle your worry in the most satisfactory and economical way.

Says the Courier-Journal: Abe Grimes was a good mate, but he stuttered badly. He told a rouster to take a calf aboard the boat. The negro did it, and was coming back, when Abe shouted at him: "Did you t-t-take that ca-ca-ca—" "Yes sir," answered the negro, "I spec' it's a cow by dis time." Abe hit at him, the negro dodged, grabbed a barrel and went on the boat with it.

The towboat 'Jack Osborne has been sold by Captain Robert Hornbrook, of Evansville, to the Planters' Transportation company of Clarksburg, Miss. Captain Hornbrook, besides a money consideration, received a new boat, that is now being built at Howard's shipyards at Jeffersonville, Ind. The Osborne is worth from $10,000 to $15,000. She left for her new home in charge of Captain Frank Norwood, who was formerly in charge of the steamer New South. The Osborne was built by the government as a snagboat and the first name was Kentucky. When she was bought by the Indiana Contract company her name was changed to Jack Osborne in honor of one of the leading captains and politicians of Evansville.

"A new star has appeared in the dramatic firmament, and her name is Mrs. Brune."

"The presentation of the stage version of F. Marion Crawford's weird story of 'Unorna' at the Century theater last night was a genuine dramatic treat."

"Mrs. Brune takes rank in the first constellation of American stars, and she richly deserves all of the praise that has been showered upon her."

Whitney, will be seen at The Kentucky Thanksgiving afternoon and evening, presenting the new three act comic opera entitled "A Normandy Wedding," from the French by J. They have been mended and are now all right.
